Ne finer tribute to the schievements of that wonderful body of men and women who constitute the Salvation Army has ever been paid by the Slient Drama than the screen version of "Salvation Nell," and no greater evidence of the artistic advance of the motion picture has been put forth than this Whitman Bennett production, which will be shown today and tomerrow.

Pauline Starke, a rare and talented interpreter of emotional parts, has the title role. She is seen as the plucky little Salvation Army lass, who, after many vicinstitudes, makes the man of her own heart go straight.

"Salvation Nell" is a human story of New York's East Side, linged with pathos, moved by a mob-passion, and throobing with a great love. It is a great photo-firame.
